Contraception

About one half of all pregnancies in the United States are unplanned. Most women can become pregnant from the time they are in their early teens until they are in their late 40s. Birth control can help couples postpone having a baby until the time is right for them. Today there are many choices of birth control for women.

Choosing a method

There are many types of birth control, including hormonal methods, IUDs and sterilization.

In addition, Complete Women Care also specializes in the latest non-incision sterilization.

About sterilization

Sterilization is a permanent method of birth control. Sterilization is a decision that should be made with care. Women who have this procedure should be certain that they do not want to have any more children.

Tubal sterilization works by surgically blocking the fallopian tubes. Sterilization does not affect a woman's menstrual cycle or sexual activity.

Tubal sterilization can be done in different ways – Complete Women Care now performs this without any incision and can be done without pain in the office. Insurance does cover the procedure cost.

For additional information on non-incisional sterilization or to schedule a consultation with any of our physicians, please contact any of our offices.
